If you don't have an Adobe Creative Suite, you can still purchase Photoshop separately, although you lose out on Photoshop's premade templates and filters. Efficacy of anti-FasL monoclonal antibody in murine colitis model: a phase 2 trial. Anti-Fas ligand (FasL) monoclonal antibody (mAb) is effective in experimental colitis models. We performed a phase 2, randomized, controlled, double-blind, placebo-controlled trial to evaluate the safety and efficacy of repeated administration of a humanized anti-FasL mAb in patients with active ulcerative colitis. All patients received mesalazine, loperamide, and a corticosteroid. In the active treatment group (n = 58), patients received three doses of anti-FasL mAb (5 mg/kg) at weeks 0, 2, and 4. In the placebo group (n = 57), patients received three doses of placebo at weeks 0, 2, and 4. At weeks 2 and 6, patients received the second and third doses, respectively, and were then treated with placebo for the subsequent 4 weeks. The primary efficacy end point was the proportion of patients who were disease-free at week 6. At the end of the study, the proportion of patients who were disease-free was 0.61 (95% CI, 0.42 to 0.82) in the active treatment group and 0.39 (95% CI, 0.23 to 0.57) in the placebo group. A trend in favor of the anti-FasL mAb was observed in endoscopic subscore at week 6 (P = 0.0673); however, this difference disappeared by week 8. The median distance from the anal verge tended to be more distal in the anti-FasL mAb group at weeks 6 and 8 (P = 0.0900 and 0.0585, respectively). Active treatment with a single course of anti-FasL mAb does not reach the predefined primary end point, but is associated with an improvement in endoscopic findings. ClinicalTrials.gov identifier: NCT00667157. Ask HN: How do you tackle the New York Times approach to web design? - docceles I've noticed a trend in the New York Times web design department in the past couple years and I've been curious about the approach they take. It usually goes a little like this:1. Use whatever new-ish software the team likes or (more often) are forced to use. 2. Ignore everything
