The aims of this study were to evaluate whether a subjective improvement in osteoarthritis (OA) symptoms can be expected after total knee arthroplasty (TKA) and whether the possible improvement correlates with a clinical improvement and with a decrease in pain. In a prospective study, 150 patients (mean age, 68.8 years) with OA were evaluated 1 year before and 1 year after TKA, using the Western Ontario and McMaster Universities Osteoarthritis Index (WOMAC) and pain scores. Patients who had undergone one or more revisions were excluded. The preoperative and postoperative WOMAC scores and pain scores were compared, using the Wilcoxon signed rank test. One hundred fifty patients were included in the study (77 men and 73 women), with a mean age of 68.8 years at surgery. A significant improvement in WOMAC scores (P 2013 was a terrible year for college football fans. In fact, it was a year filled with stories of tragedy, from the death of former Arizona Cardinal Byron Leftwich to the tragic passing of former Colorado Bronco and current NFL linebacker Von Miller. It was a year where we lost the ultimate class act, Brett Favre, and a year where we lost the greatest quarterback to ever play the game, Troy Aikman. Those are two former Dallas Cowboy greats, and just like the Dallas Cowboys, there will always be a void in Dallas when we lose greats like they both. Speaking of greats, what about the best receiver in the history of the NFL? No, 82157476af
